Icons of Design: Sneak Peak

by Erin Feher

Thursday, October 22, 2009 07:40 AM

The latest showcase house to take to the sky is Icons of Design at San Francisco's Millennium Tower, where 29 designers took over the 52nd floor of the recently completed luxury condo project and created amazing rooms that more than stand up to the breathtaking views.

Ken Paige, owner of Paige Glass, pulled together this showcase in only a month, reaching out to local designers and asking them each to pick one room from each of the four units. CH+D dropped in a few days before the showcase, which benefits a different local charity each weekend and opens to the public this Saturday. Check out the completed rooms through November 22, and check back here for additional coverage of the designers, parties and, of course, the completed looks.

Scheiber Design Group designed the living room in unit 52A. Graphic patterns in grays and golds perfectly complemented the view of the sun dipping below the city skyline.

Reba Jones' library in 52A was still in the works, but we loved the details we saw, such as Lucite shelving topped with eclectic ephemera. But the showstopper was a closet that she transformed into a bar with black-lacquered walls, oversize mirrors and a chemists' array of beakers and test tubes.

Nancy Van Natta Associates created a whimsical, woodland-inspired dining room in 52B complete with a chandelier of silver-leafed twigs and rock crystals.

Designer Michael Merill and his team were busy setting up their dining room in 52C for a photo shoot. Wine was poured and the plates were set with elegant oyster shells filled with pearls.

Vernon Applegate was perfectly relaxed inside Applegate Tran's master bedroom in 52D. It seemed that their work was nearly complete and the room looked ready for its reveal.

A simple dining nook in the living room of 52D was designed by Charles de Lisle Workshop and comes with a serving of Bay views.
